UK Outlook for Saturday 6 Nov 2021 to Monday 15 Nov 2021:
An unsettled and changeable start to this period with typically autumnal conditions dominating the weather. Wettest and windiest conditions expected in the west and northwest over the weekend with bands of heavy and perhaps prolonged rain and a risk of gales. There is a risk of this rain being impactful, however there will also be some drier interludes. Driest and brightest conditions most likely in the southeast where any bands of rain will be weaker than those seen elsewhere. Occasionally windy throughout with the strongest winds expected in the northwest but becoming less windy by the end of the period. Temperatures will be around or slightly above average however, some brief colder spells are still possible.
